

We invite all classified professionals to join their colleagues in a professional learning opportunity carefully designed for you!

Classified Professionals Day(s) is your opportunity to learn, engage, grow professionally – and an event to recognize your invaluable work in support of students and others.

Rather than a single-day event, this year's virtual activities will take place in different time slots over the course of four days – March 29-April 1 – to give all classified professionals the opportunity to build your own schedule.

Classified professionals are the backbone of our operations, typically working behind the scenes to keep our campus and district operations running effectively and efficiently. Your contributions are key and the activities planned for Classified Professionals Day(s) are designed to strengthen relationships, foster understanding and further professional and personal development.

Administrators will be urged to encourage Classified participation in this important event, and I join in lending my enthusiastic support.

Classified Professionals Day(s) is this District's way to honor the work that you do and to let you know you are deeply appreciated for always striving to make our institution student-centered, particularly during these unprecedented times.

Lynn

Lynn Ceresino Neault, Ed.D.
Chancellor, Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District